THE GOLDEN MADAM

Emma stiffened with apprehension at the upcoming conversation. "Will," she said sternly, keeping her voice low. "That's what I need to talk to you about. Caroline told me about your bragging this morning. Do you even know how much you already owe the saloon at this point?" They pushed open the swinging doors of the Pearl and Emma was relieved to see that Caroline wasn't downstairs. If Will saw Caroline he was bound to become distracted, and their conversation would be over.

"It isn't just about your tab. I'm worried about your safety. You can't be going around town telling everyone your business! You know the Innocents have spies everywhere."

The Innocents were a group of local bandits that thrived in this lawless land, and their numbers were rapidly growing. Why should one man break his back to mine gold, when he could just take it? So far this year over fifty miners in Virginia City had been found dead, relieved of their gold and pockets empty.

Will just smiled and poured himself a beer. "Mrs. Fairweather, you always worry too much. The Innocents won't pay me any mind. With this next score, I'll get enough gold to get both of us out of here. You'll have more than enough to get yourself back to Chicago and live like a queen!"

Emma sighed, but persisted. "The Innocents will find out about your plan if you go advertising it all around town! You've drawn enough attention to yourself as it is, and you won't get far with them watching you." She paused. "What is this plan, anyway?"

Will simply downed the rest of his beer and gave Emma a big hug. "I'll see you tonight," he said with a wink.

CHAPTER 2

The miners started to pour into the saloon that evening and Emma kept an eye on the door, watching for Will. With any luck, she would be able to talk him out of his reckless endeavor and convince him to leave town for a while. Rumors traveled fast in these parts, and the Innocents had probably already heard that Will was scheming again. Maybe if he went up north to the town of Butte for a while it would blow over.

The bandits were becoming more and more brazen in their attacks. Just last week, a man who was rumored to be moving ten thousand dollars to Bannack had been found dead. That particular miner also happened to be Mayor Sanders' brother, and the mayor was furious. Public patience was growing thin with the bandits and there was rumor of a Vigilance Committee being put together to stop them, with the mayor at the helm.

Emma couldn't count on the local law to protect Will. Some folks whispered that Sheriff Plemmons was passing on information to the Innocents about any gold being moved through the area.

2️⃣ Paragraph & 3️⃣ Line Break

Paragraph Tag

Used to write text content. Similar to paragraphs in a newspaper article. Without paragraphs, text becomes a massive block and difficult to read.

HTML is the foundation of every website. I am learning web development step by step.

Line Break

Creates a new line. It acts just like pressing the Enter key in a document to push content to the next line immediately.

Hello  Welcome to my website  Hello Welcome to my website

4️⃣ Horizontal Line & 5️⃣ Comments

Horizontal Line

Creates a horizontal separator line across the page. It's like a divider line drawn in a notebook separating different topics.

My Website  Welcome to my page.

Comments

Comments are used to write notes in the code. The browser does not display them. They are like notes written by a teacher in a book margin.

My Website

6️⃣ Text Formatting Tags

- Bold & Strong: Use to make text bold, and for text that has high importance visually and semantically.
- Italic & Emphasized: Use for italic text, and to emphasize a specific section of text contextually.
- Underline: Use to underline text, which is useful for highlighting specific terms or concepts.
- Combined Example: Tags can be nested inside one another, e.g., `My name is Saurav`

My Profile My name is Saurav I am learning HTML I want to become a Full Stack Developer

7️⃣ Mini Project

Create a blog webpage file named blog.html. Apply the tags learned today to structure your first real web page.

        My Blog   My Learning Journey  Day 1 I started learning HTML. Day 2 Today I learned HTML tags.  Goal: Full Stack.

💻 Practice Tasks

Task 1

Create news.html. Include a main heading, 2 subheadings, 3 paragraphs, and a horizontal line.

Task 2

Create daily_routine.html. Write your daily study routine. Use bold, italic, and line breaks.

Task 3

Create motivation.html. Write a motivational message utilizing the formatting tags learned.

🧠 Interview & Quiz

Interview Qs

1. How many heading tags exist in HTML?
2. What is the difference between and ?
3. What does the tag do?
4. What are HTML comments used for?

Bonus: Who invented HTML?
(Tim Berners-Lee)

Quick Quiz

1. Which tag creates a paragraph?
2. Which tag creates a line break?
3. Which tag makes text bold?
4. Which tag creates a horizontal line?
5. Which tag is used for writing code comments?

🧠 What You Learned Today

Structure

Mastered through for clear hierarchy, and for primary text blocks.

Flow & Spacing

Learned how to break lines immediately with and visually divide thematic sections using .

Formatting

Explored semantic text styling (,) and non-rendering developer notes using .

💡 Motivation

> When beginners open the code of big sites like Amazon or Google, they still see the same basic HTML tags you learned today.
